

Contents

List of Contributors	xxi
1. Dialogues for Discovery: What? Why? When?	1
Christine A. Padesky and Helen Kennerley
Welcome All Therapists	2
Dialogues for Discovery vs Changing Clients' Minds	2
Definitions	4
Discovery Methods in Psychotherapy: What Are They?	6
The Roots of Socratic Dialogue: A Brief History	6
Socrates	7
Alfred Adler: Socratic questions in psychotherapy	8
Aaron T. Beck: Socratic questioning in cognitive therapy	8
James C. Overholser: The philosophy and logic of Socratic methods in psychotherapy	10
Christine A. Padesky: Purposes and uses of Socratic Dialogue and other guided discovery methods	12
Other guided discovery methods	19
Dialogues for Discovery: Why Use Them?	27
Empirical research findings	27
Socratic Dialogue: When to Use?	30
When do we use Socratic Dialogue?	31
When do we not use Socratic Dialogue?	36
Summary	39
References	42
2. The 4-Stage Model of Socratic Dialogue	45
Christine A. Padesky
From Socratic Questioning to Socratic Dialogue	46
3 Speeds of Therapy	46
4-Stage Model of Socratic Dialogue	48
Stage 1: Informational questions	49
Stage 2: Empathic listening	60
Stage 3: Summary of information gathered	69
Stage 4: Analytical and synthesizing questions	75
Clinical illustration—debriefing a between-session learning assignment	78
Socratic Dialogue is embedded in the 7-Column Thought Record	83
Embedding Socratic Dialogue in other guided discovery methods	83
Constructive use of Socratic Dialogue	84
When to use Socratic Dialogue	89
When Socratic Dialogue is not helpful	89

Summary	90
References	92
3. Guided Discovery for Depression and Suicide	95
Marjorie E. Weishaar
Depression Overview	96
CBT for Depression	97
Engaging Depressed Clients in Collaborative Treatment	100
Engaging the skeptical client in collaborative treatment	102
Engaging an agitated client	109
Activating depressed clients	114
When clients generate meager evidence to counter a hot thought	124
Hopelessness	127
Make a safety plan with suicidal clients	129
Client misses a session	132
Relapse Management	137
Recovery from a low mood	138
Summary	141
References	142
4. Guided Discovery with Anxiety	145
Gillian Butler and Freda McManus
Understanding Anxiety	145
Shared features among anxiety and related disorders	146
Common Traps Arising from Client Beliefs	149
Client intolerance of uncertainty	150
The perceived need for self-protection	164
Rigidity in response to anxiety	176
Common Traps Originating in Therapists' Beliefs	178
Fear of being unkind	179
Fears the client's vulnerability is real	181
Fine-tuning Socratic Dialogue	184
Avoid questions that unhelpfully amplify worry	185
When clients avoid affect	185
When clients lack confidence	186
When a client has limited experience of not being anxious	187
Summary	188
References	191
5. Imagery: The Language of Emotion	195
Christine A. Padesky and Emily A. Holmes
What Is Mental Imagery?	196
Importance of Imagery in Psychotherapy	197
Imagery has stronger emotional impact than verbal processing	197
Intrusive negative mental imagery occurs in a wide range of disorders	199

Imagery can boost client confidence in alternative beliefs	199
Therapist Neglect of Imagery in Therapy: Common Traps	200
Use of Socratic Dialogue to identify imagery	201
Imagery and Socratic Dialogue	212
Collaborative case conceptualization	213
Exploring and testing imagery	218
Imagery, behavior change, and learning assignment adherence	231
Summary	236
References	237
6. Inflexible Beliefs	243
Helen Kennerley and Christine A. Padesky
Understanding Inflexible Beliefs	245
Therapy Approaches for Working with Inflexible Beliefs	246
Padesky's prejudice metaphor	247
Common Therapy Traps: Inflexible Beliefs	251
Client beliefs are very different from therapist beliefs	252
Client mistrusts the therapist	256
Client beliefs interfere with the alliance	260
When beliefs are not formulated as words or even pictures	264
Client avoids therapy explorations because of fears of overwhelming emotion or traumatic memories	266
Be patient and also stay active	271
Use humor and a language the client can embrace	272
Develop imagery and case conceptualizations that bring ideas to life	273
All evidence contrary to existing beliefs is discounted	275
Clients are so afraid of change that little or nothing happens between sessions	282
The client's inflexible beliefs are endorsed by social, domestic, or professional networks	284
Summary	287
Appendix: Core Belief and Schema-Focused CBT Strategies	289
References	289
7. Impulsive and Compulsive Behaviors	291
Helen Kennerley
Understanding Impulsive and Compulsive Behaviors	291
Central cognitions: What to look for	295
Hard to express meanings: Felt sense	300
Relapse Management	305
Damage limitation	306
Safer, substitute behaviors	312
When Other Methods Are More Appropriate	330
Summary	331
References	332

8. Guided Discovery with Adversity	333
Stirling Moorey
Questions to Help Unlock Clients' Strengths	336
Common Traps in Working with Clients Facing Adversity	340
Client traps	341
Therapist traps	352
Environmental traps	359
Summary	368
Acknowledgments	370
References	370
9. Chasing Janus: Socratic Dialogue with Children and Adolescents	371
Robert D. Friedberg
Common Traps in Therapy with Children and Adolescents	371
Differences between Children and Adults When Scaffolding a Socratic Dialogue	372
Navigating Three Common Traps using Socratic Dialogue	374
Ask for permission to test thoughts	376
When and why adolescents want to hold onto thoughts	378
Therapist-created barriers	385
Socratic use of games	387
Foster fun in therapy	390
Experiential guided discovery	392
Match the informational processing level of the child	395
Dose Socratic Dialogue with empathy and optimal doubt	397
Summary	400
References	401
10. Socratic Dialogue in Group Therapy	405
James L. Shenk
An Introduction to Cognitive Behavioral Group Therapy	408
Socratic Dialogue in Group Therapy	409
Advantages of using Socratic Dialogue in group therapy	409
Strategic levels of Socratic Dialogue in group therapy	415
Specific applications of Socratic Dialogue in group therapy	421
Common Clinical Traps in Group CBT	426
When is Socratic Dialogue not appropriate in group therapy?	444
Summary	446
References	447
11. Supervision and Therapist Beliefs	449
Helen Kennerley and Christine A. Padesky
The Many Tasks of Supervision	451
Common Traps in Supervision	452
Supervision to enhance learning—getting the balance right	453
Engage supervisees in structuring session learning	457

Employ active learning methods in supervision	459
Reflective practice	461
Seeing the bigger picture	467
The supervisory relationship	470
Additional problems in supervision	482
When Other Methods Might Be More Appropriate	482
Summary	483
References	485
12. Dialogues for Discovery: What Next?	487
Christine A. Padesky
Discoveries Found	488
Research findings: Sudden gains in psychotherapy	488
4-Stage Model of Socratic Dialogue: Recap	489
Discoveries Still to Come	490
Research	490
Individual therapists	492
Developing your “dialogues for discovery” skills	493
Reflective Practice Worksheets	495
Future of Dialogues for Discovery in Psychotherapy	497
Summary	497
References	498
Appendices	501
Reflective Practice Worksheet 1	502
Reflective Practice Worksheet 2	503
Reflective Practice Worksheet 3	504
Traps Guide	505
Index	509